ASSOCIATION OF DONOR RELATIONS PROFESSIONALS

VOLUNTEER SERVICE AWARD

is hereby presented to

Jamie Dixon

The ADRP Volunteer Service Award recognizes a current member of ADRP who, through current and cumulative efforts, has generously contributed their time and energy to advance the mission of the Association and the profession. Nominees may be visible or work "behind the scenes"; they may have done something that made others go "wow" or worked quietly over time, following through with commitments and achieving results. This award will be presented each year at the annual conference. The ADRP President selects the ADRP Volunteer Service Award recipient in consultation with the ADRP Board of Directors.

Jamie Dixon, we celebrate you as the 2026 recipient of the Association of Donor Relations Professionals Volunteer Service Award. We recognize your extraordinary generosity, dedicated leadership, and deep commitment in service to our association, our members, and the profession of donor relations.

Volunteers form the cornerstone of ADRP. Since our earliest beginnings, they have been integral to our association, united by a shared commitment to advancing the profession. Jamie, you exemplify the very best of that volunteer spirit. From your earliest service with the International Stewardship Awards Committee, you stood out for the tremendous capability and commitment you brought to the work, along with genuine warmth, humility, and care for others.

You have continued to step forward wherever your energy and talents could make a difference, taking on significant responsibilities and carrying them with remarkable organization, thoughtfulness, and grace. Even as others recognize the extent of your contributions, your instinct is to celebrate those around you and express gratitude for the opportunity to serve. That generosity of spirit and belief in the value of collective effort are among the qualities that make your leadership so special.

Over the past several years, your service has extended across the Education Committee, the Volunteer and Membership Engagement Committee, the Strategic Initiatives Committee, and the International Stewardship Awards Committee, including leadership roles as both Chair and Co-Chair.

Your leadership has been particularly instrumental to the continued success of ADRP's webinar program, one of our longest-standing educational pillars. As a core curator of the monthly series, you help ensure its themes, speakers, and content remain engaging, relevant, and meaningful. Your organization, foresight, and care have helped the Webinar Subcommittee of the Education Committee consistently deliver the high-quality programming our community expects and deserves.

That same spirit is evident in your leadership of the Volunteer and Membership Engagement Committee, where you have helped reimagine how ADRP engages and supports its volunteers. You champion new ideas, seek ways to introduce more members to volunteer opportunities, and have a particular gift for connecting people with opportunities to contribute and grow. At the heart of that work is genuine care for people and a commitment to ensuring they feel welcomed, supported, and valued.

Your service exemplifies the very best of volunteer leadership. You are dependable, thoughtful, and deeply considerate, bringing a bright and generous energy that lifts the people around you. You make demanding work feel more possible, collaborative work more joyful, and our association stronger through your presence. Your dedication and leadership set a remarkable example, but it is the humility and humanity with which you offer those gifts that make your contribution truly exceptional.

It is my sincere privilege to thank you for everything you have given to ADRP. In recognition of your outstanding volunteer service and lasting impact on our education, membership, and volunteer communities, I am proud to present you with the 2026 Volunteer Service Award.

With gratitude,

Marian Johnson, President
